
Title: Emps

Author: Jaggerauth

It is rumored that the Emps lived in what were called Silverleaf trees. They were harmonious with nature and absolutely shunned all violence, thus they rarely, if ever, interacted with humans.

Emps were ape-like in appearance and had a very strong affinity towards magical abilities. It is also rumored that they were in such harmony with nature that they could feel it when nature suffered. Their harmonizing was so great that Emps would never eat meat and subsisted primarily on milk. It is also rumored that Emps have a special love for honey.

Emps were empathic, and could communicate with one another non-verbally. It was also said that they were especially close to the Wisps, which we all know of in our world today.

It is unclear as to where the Emps are today. They existed after the Cataclysm following Exodus' defeat, and could possibly be the distant evolutions of the Fuzzies, but their current whereabouts are unknown. It is speculated that a large disharmony in nature either forced them all into a prolonged slumber or possibly killed them.

As for the Silverleaf trees, they used to exist deep in the forests of Yew, as well as on Serpent Isle, and could be easily identified by their namesake silvery leaves.

These trees seem to be gone in our world, however. This could possibly be due to an overabundance of logging for materials.